Promptness a Big Factor
In Business, He Says.

All the world likes promptness—the working man wants his meals at the appointed hour; the young man appreciates the girl most who is ready when he calls in the evening; the school teacher praises the pupil most who is always on time; the buyer seeks the store that gives good service.

We Americans are most cosmopolitan in our likes and dislikes. Some prefer one brand of cigar to another; some do not like to smoke at all. Yet, the great "all of us" like attention when we enter a store with the intention of buying.

W. C. Knight, one of the owners of THE DRUG SHOP, has made the word PROMPTNESS a part of his business. He employs enough well-trained clerks to give his trade the proper attention. Even to the general store arrangement, everything is in the most convenient place for the customer and clerk alike. This is simply a few steps in the advance toward the word EFFICIENCY. If the clerk is able to find the article called for in a hurry, the customer is given quick service.

The FREE delivery plan initiated at THE DRUG SHOP is another striking example of PROMPTNESS—try it and see if this is not true.

WALKED HERE FROM K. C.Business Man Chose Hike Rather Than Conventional Vacation.

As a result of the recent rains, every creek along the wagon roads from Kansas City to Columbia is swollen, often to the floors of the bridges, and wheat is piled in the fields waiting for the sun to dry it out, preparatory to threshing, according to Elliot G. Nathan of Kansas City, who arrived in Columbia Friday night after making the 170-mile trip on foot.

By way of variation from the usual vacation of the city business man, Mr. Nathan, who is 23 years old, put on his oldest suit, threw a knapsack of "indispensables" over his shoulders, and started out last Sunday morning to walk to Columbia. He made the trip in six days, averaging about thirty miles a day.

"I thought of sleeping in the open," said Mr. Nathan, "but one night in a haystack, with the rain and mosquitoes, was enough for me. Before that night was over, I had my feet tied up in my extra shirt, and my coat over my head."

No threshing is being done along the road, Mr. Nathan says, although little harm will be done, the farmers say, if there is sunshine for a while.

When Mr. Nathan came to the county poor farm just outside of Marshall, he found himself sympathized with. "We never turn a tramp down," he was told. "Come in and spend the night."

But there was something about that—

And Mr. Nathan pressed on.

WHISKY SOLD IN COCOANUTSColumbian Recalls the Early Days of Prohibition in Kansas.

Will Gooding, night watchman at the Hamilton-Brown shoe factory, read in the Missourian last week about the trials of Columbia officers with bootleggers.

Mr. Gooding can appreciate the troubles the Columbia officer are having, for he lived in Kansas several years ago when the state first went dry.

"The selling of whisky in Missouri in dry counties," said Mr. Gooding, "is mild indeed compared with early practices in the Jayhawk state. They used to sell it in hollowed-out walking canes, umbrella handles, 15-cent candy-balls, and in cocoanut shells. You would go to your grocer, give him the right kind of look and then purchase a cocoanut. After you got the cocoanut home you simply bored a hole in the end and there you found several fine drinks."

AUCTION DAY TOMORROWFour Hundred Are Expected Here for Monthly Sales.

Four hundred persons from the country around Columbia are expected tomorrow for the monthly farmers' auction. In front of the Courthouse there will be stands where the visitors may buy and sell.

"At first we thought we would not succeed in bringing the country people to Columbia, but after eleven months of experience we find the sales day the most successful way of getting them together," said C. O. Hanes, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association.

PENN'S

In every home the summer weather requires some cool drink with the meal. Iced Tea has become a favorite; served in the tall glasses with a lemon for those who want the flavor.

Most people sweeten Iced Tea. Sugar does not dissolve quickly, unless it is stirred. It is necessary, therefore, to have extra long tea spoons.

In our window, Monday, you will see a triple plated silver iced tea spoon. It's just what you've been looking for and the price is exceptionally reasonable. Look at them tomorrow; we guarantee their quality and sell them, six—a half dozen for $1.00.

We are feeling better
after our vacation.

Of course that means good pictures.

But that is the Wilcox
rule anyhow—good pictures,
